KING LO BENGULA IN A TRAP. HIS ENEMIES SOUTH OF HIM AND THE TSEISE FLY TO THE NORTH,

Terrible Slaughter of His Soldiers to the profile Battle-500 of Them Killed or Wounded by the British Cans - The March to Lo Bengula's Chief Kranl, LONDON, Nov. 2.-A despatch from Cape Town says that native runners who are reaching Fort Victoria confirm the belief that King Lo Bengula has been trapped. He is blocked to the northward by the tsetse-fly country, through which it will be impossible for him to drive his cattle, and to the southward by the imperial troops and the forces of the British South Africa Company. Lo Bengula's forces are supposed to be in the neighborhood of the Shangani and Gwelo rivers, 140 miles west of Fort Charter. Their capture seems probable. On the night of Oct. 20 Major Forbes's scouts reconnoitred the Insugonini kraal, the headquarters of the Inaugonini regiment, the strongest and most efficient regiment of the Matabele army. The scouts found the kraal li of Matabeles. Some of the scouts returned to Major Forbes and reported the facts to him. Major Forbes despatched 100 cavalrymen and two Maxim guns to make an attack on the place. When this force arrived they found the kraal deserted, the natives having been warned of the presence of the British by their outs, made their escape into the bush before the troops had time to get to the scene.

While a small detachment of the company's men were guarding a number of Matabele while a small detachment of the company's men were guarding a number of Matabele prisoners on the night of Oct. 23 they were attacked by a body of Matabeles, and a sharp fight ensued. The natives were finally driven off. During the fight one of the company's officers named Burnett was shot and killed.

According to later accounts of the battle that occurred on Tuesday the attacking natives numbered 0.000. The British were fully propared to receive the enemy. In the first rush made by the Matabeles they swept past the British pickets. This brought them within range of the British guas, and a deadly fire was poured into their ranks. For a moment the natives held their ground and then broke and fled to covea in the bush. The British cavalry then sallied forth from the langer and chased the whole force. The native regiments did not stop in their flight. The rocky ground over which they fled prevented the cavalry from making an effective pursuit. In this flight five hundred of the Matabeles were killet or wounded. The company's forces lost two killed—a white man and a negro—and six wounded. When the light was over he road was found and an terrops in their pursuers but were deleated with serious lose. Many of them were captured.

Apart of Lo Bengula's forces were overtaken by Major Forber's column last night near Bulawayo. The Matabeles turned on their pursuers but were deleated with serious lose. Many of them were captured.

Advices from Fort Salisbury, under date of Oct. 29, describe daily skirmishes since Oct, 24 between the Matabeles and the troops of the Chartered Company. The Company's troops went into laager every night and awalted anxiously the attacks of the hostile innis. On the night before the decisive battle of Oct. 28 their scouts warned them of the approaching Matabeles onslaugh. The troops were fully laagered when the implic came.

Just before darylight shots from the outpoats gave warning that the attack was near. Within a few moments the sentres and native scouts had burried into the laager. No bett prisoners on the night of Oct. 23 they were atnacked by a body of Matabeles, and a sharp

Experts, and events have justified its wisdom.
Lo Bengula never had a chance. He was utterly routed. The night of the main attack had been very still and nobody dreamed that Lo Bengula's main army was so near.

"On the third attack the enemy did not stop to use their spears, but broke and fled at the first taste of the Maxims. The troops went for the Matabele with loud cheers and shouting. There was much fleree hacking, thrusting, and shooting with revolvers at close quarters. The Matabeles, but for the broken ground, would have been exterminated. It is estimated that 1,000 were killed and wounded."

The Sultan Steps Of the Boards.

LONDON, Nov. 2.-Among those at the Galety Theatre last night to see the burlesque "Don Juan" was the Turkish Ambassador to Great Britain. The plot of the play is in part laid in Constantinople, and one of the characters was the Sultan of Turkey. The Ambassador watched the play with far more than passing interest until the Sultan appeared on the stage. He was represented as an old man keen in his pursuit of female slaves. This roused the Ambassador's ire, and he withdrew from the theatre.

The A. C. O. Company Reports the Result At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the American Cotton Oil Company yesterday. all of the directors who served last year were redlected, except that John H. Mr. Robert F. Munro was elected Second Vice-President, and retains the office of Secretary. The other officers who served last year were redlected. In his report to the stockholders Mr. Edward D. Adams, Chairman of the Board of Directors, states that the capital account of the company has been reduced during the year by the retirement of $224,000, par value, of debenture boads which were purchased last May n accordance with the plan for retiring the bonds approved by the stockholders at their ast annual meeting. The bonds were bought at lower prices than they could have been called. In addition the company saved the interest on the bonds from the date of purchase to the end of the fiscal year, Aug. 31. In other respects the capital account of the company remains unchanged.

In pursuance of the policy adopted at the last annual meeting, that the properties owned by the company should be maintained in the highest state of efficiency for econom ical operation, $953,828 has been expended for new construction and charged to per manent investment account, and $527,582 has been expended for maintaining and improving various properties. All of this last amount has been charged to the operating expenses of the various concerns and deducted from the gross earnings in arriving at the net profits for the year. These disbursements have increased the capacity of the company and also contributed to facility and economy in operating.

The amount expended for new construction less $110,510 received from sales of real estate and machinery and $23,182 depreciation of property, leaves $820,135 to be added to the appraised valuation of the company's plant at

PARLIAMENT CONVENES.

BRITISH STATESMEN RESUME DEBATE AT WESTMINSTER.

The Parish Conneils Bill Brought Up for the Second Reading-Provisions of the Bill and Grounds for Tory Opposition, LONDON, Nov. 2.-The opening of Parliament to-day attracted little attention. Questions were asked in regard to Col. Carrington and his mission to Mashonaland. Mr. Sydney Buxton, Parliamentary Secretary of the Colepial Office, said that Col. Carrington had been sent to South Africa in a purely military capacity.

Mr. Henry Fowler, President of the Local Government Board, then moved the second reading of the Parish Councils bill. This bill proposes to form in rural parishes. having a population of 300 and upward, a Council to be annually elected by ballot, by men and women having the right to vote for members of the County Council. These Parish Councils are to consist of not less than five, nor more than fifteen members. They are to take over all the existing powers of the vestries, excepting as regards Church affairs and Church charities, and they are to have control of parish property, land allotments, roads, water supply, local watching and lighting, and sanitation generally, and they are to have charge of the compulsory purchase of land under the sanction of the Local Government Board. In urban districts, as well as rural districts, the bill abolishes electoral disqualifications on the ground of sex. The administration of the poor law is to remain under the jurisdiction of loards of Guardians, as it is now, but the Boards are to be elected under the new fran-

Boards are to be elected under the new Iranchise.

In making the motion Mr. Fowler said that the bill dealt with 13.000 rural parishes, of which number 6,000 had populations of under 300.
As no Council would be constituted where the population is under 300, these would be required to be grouped. This matter formed one of the difficulties with which the House must grapple. The Government attached no magic to the 300 limit. It rather desired to give the Councils the greatest elasticity in the matter of grouping. It would emower County Councilsto give a Parish Council to any parish, whatever its size might be, if the parish itself consented.

consented.

An important question was what effect the bill would have on the Church of England. The Conservatives said that it would bring about the spoliation of the Church; that it would disended charities and out the Church from control of the schools. Certainly the bill transferred the control of purely parish property from the church wardens to secular officers, as it ought to be transferred.

This statement was greeted with cheers by the Government supporters.

This statement was greeted with cheers by the Government supporters.
Continuing, Mr. Fowler said that neither Church schools nor purely ecclesiastical charities would be affected. Regarding the public elementary schools Mr. Fowler said the Parish Councils would have no control.
Mr. Walter Long (Progressive Conservative), member for the West Derby division of Liverpool, congratulated the House on the fact that the bill was not likely to lead to a bitter party controversy, but some amendment to the measure, he said, was absolutely necessary. The powers given to the Parish Councils for the compulsory purchase of land were foo great. These powers must be cultailed. The areas which would be allowed a Council must be calarged, as the 300 population limit was too small. The County Councils, he added, should retain control of the poor law administration and sanitary matters. tration and sanitary matters.

His Response to a Tonst at a Banquet of the Shemeld Cutlers, LONDON. Nov. 2.-The annual banquet of the Sheffield cutlers was held this evening. Among the guests were Thomas F. Bayard, United States Ambassador. "I have heard that war described as the late war and then as the war of 1812. Lately it has had a more gracious title, and has been called the last war. Now. I can disclose in this connection my only diplomatic mission. It is that the war of 1812 shall remain our last war. May it always he our last war. The English and the Americans are strong enough to adopt these principles of good will for their practice. Following these principles, our descendants in the distant future. In closing, Mr. Barard neked all to join him in the hope that the English and American flags would always float in amity. He was cheered loudly as he took his seat.

And Their Mothers Warmed Their Jackets-So Now They Have Disbanded, The Young Clinton Rangers, a social and athletic organization of Jersey City which has been in existence just one week, was disbanded yesterday. There was a house warming on Wednesday night, followed by a jacket warming some time toward morning, and the mem-bers, under the persuasive influence of their mothers' slippers, have decided that a social and athletic club is no good, any way. Besides, the treasury is empty.

The club consisted of about twenty boys who live in the neighborhood of Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, Jersey City, and range in age from ten to thirteen years. When the proposition was made a week ago to organize the club, Jimmy Mailoy and Gus Errickson said they could fix up a club room in the cellar of the house where they lived. The house is a blg frametenement in the rear of 215 Fifteenth street. The club was duly organized, with Jack Barrett, President; Jimmy Malloy, Secretary, and Johnny Grant, Treasurer, Every member contributed something toward fitting up the club room. Chairs of various descripions and in different stages of disapidation were taken surreptitiously from the houses of the members and lugged into the cellar President Barrett furnished a pack of cards, wney Patton brought a pair of boxing gloves Mickey Burns contributed a rusty sword, and other members lugged in checkers, a football, and other paraphernalis required for the use of the club. Meetings were held every after-

of the club. Meetings were held every afternoon and evening.

Jimmy Mailoy's mother occasionally interfered with the harmony and pleasure of the meetings. She had an objectionable habit of breaking in on the club when a meeting was in full blast and causing an immediate adjournment without any regard whatever for parliamentary usages. When Mrs. Mailoy appeared, the members scattered in every direction. She also had an offensive way of pitching the furniture into one of the coal bins and locking the cellar door. Mrs. Mailoy had a prejudice against the practice of smoking cigarettes and playing chafe. As she had her household duties to attend to, however, her interruption of the meetings was only temporars.

The club, notwithstanding the drawbacks,

Dorary.

The club, notwithstanding the drawbacks, was on the high road to prosperity. The members paid their dues with commendable prompthess, and when on Monday the Treasurer reported a balance of 60 cents in the treasury it was unanimously decided to have a house warming Wednesday night. Among the members prosent at the house warming in addition to the officers were Mickey lurns. Jack O'Keefe, Fete Mannion, Owney Fatton, Mickey Kennedy, Eddie Kans. Billy Curtin, Johnny Fullen, and Tommy Flaherty.

There was considerable discussion as to what kind of refreshments they should have. It was finally decided that whiskey was the proper thing, and Treasurer Grant gave Gus Frickson 45 cents, with instructions to go to John Kennelly's distillery, at550 Grove street, and get a bottle of his best rye. The messenger returned with the whiskey, and it was passed around. The effects were apparent very quickly. At first the boys became hilarious and then they got sick. The Treasurer depleted the treasury by sending the remaining 45 cents for another bottle of whiskey. When that was finished the members of the club were lying senseless on the cellar floor. Policeman McGurk was called and had them taken home. Jimmy Malloy and Gus Errickson, who had drank more than the others, were thought to be in such a critical condition that City Physician Hoffman was sent for, and had considerable difficulty in ridding them of the effects of the liquor. All the boys were pronounced out of danger yesterlay afternoon.

The Clintons had arranged for a Thanksgiving Day parade, but it is off.

LOTOS CLUB ART EXHIBITION.

The Club's New Dining Room Proves to Be an Admirable Exhibition Room. When the Lotos Club built the dining room of its new home on Fifth avenue, thought was taken of its use for art exhibition purposes.

Sky and artificial light were kept in mind by architect and interior decorator, and yesterday it was found that both had contrived admirably. Yesterday and last evening a primirably. Yesterday and last evening a private view was given of the first exhibition of paintings in the new club house, and it was demonstrated that the handsome oval dining room makes a perfect exhibition room, both by daylight and electric light.

According to the custom of the club governing its art exhibitions, only canvasses minted by members have been hung, and this year the exhibition is larger and more representative than any of the previous ones. To-morrow night the club's housewarming reception is to be held, and Monday is lady's day, when the art exhibition and the principal rooms of the new house will be open to lady guests of members.

COL, CAPANAGH WITHDRAWS HIS RE-MARK ABOUT LIKUT, DREW. The Colonel Has Not Made Up His Mind Ket Whother or Not He Will Resign— Gen, Fitsgerald's Lecture Sets the Offi-ers Hard at Work Brilling the Mea. Bankrupt Stock

A regular monthly meeting, with special fea-tures, of the Board of Officers of the Sixtyninth Regiment was held behind closed doors at the regiment's armory last night. Considerable routine business was done, and there was a good deal of excited talk. When the neeting broke up the officers came out with flushed faces and assured the waiting reporters that it was only a regular monthly meeting of the Board, and that nothing unusual had happened.

There was a very full attendance when the meeting was called to order at about 8:30. Col. Cavanagh was present, and so were Lieut.

Col. Moran and Major Duffy.

Liout. Drew of Company F, whose feelings were hurt by his Colonel intimating at the meeting on Oct. 26 that he was drunk, was also there in a silk hat and an unpleasant frame of mind. There was quite a crowd of members of the Sixty-ninth in the hall outside the meeting room, and they were much interested in the niture of every description, in finest proceedings within. Overhead, Capt. Morgan was drilling his men into shape. It was 11 o'clock when the meeting broke up. At first the officers were very reticent, but finally it was learned that there had been further developments in the difficulty between Col. Cavanagh and Lieut: Drew. The Lieutenant arose and said: "It is very painful to me to be obliged to speak of the subject which I shall mention. My superior officer took occasion to intimate, at a recent meeting, that I had been deinking. It is true that I was not in so many words accused of being drunk, but this was intimated. I am not a drinking man, and that insinuation was very hard to endure. I now believe, however, that the words were hastily spoken, and I hope that in the future an understanding will be treached between Col. Cavanagh and myself, and that in justice to me the expression will be withdrawn."

Col. Cavanagh arose and said:

'In saying that the words were hastily spoken lieut. Drew is quite right. They were hastily spoken, and if I had stepped to think I should not have said what I did. I regret the matter exceedingly."

This being satisfactorily disposed of, the meeting proceeded to a consideration of the speak of the subject which I shall mention light called the attention of Col. J. Schuyler the New York Board of Education, at which by's conduct as a fellow Commissioner and prevented the reading of his letter of resigna-tion. Col. Crosby said that he had resigned on This being satisfactorily disposed of, the meeting proceeded to a consideration of the publicity given to the proceedings of the last meeting, and speeches were made against making public any of the proceedings. As far as is known, nothing was said in the meeting about Col. Cavanagh's resigning. Afterward the Colonel was asked by a reporter if he had offered his resignation.

"No, sir; I have not," he replied emphatically.

of his surroundings. Commissioner Moriarty

"No. sir; I have not," he replied emphatically.

Shall you resign?" asked the reporter.

I haven't made up my mind about that. I can't talk about the matter now. You will have to excuse me."

Major McCarthy said to the reporter:

"I would give $100 to find out who gave the report of our last meeting to the papers. Of course it was some one of our number, but we can't tell who. There was something said about that in the meeting to-night, but no action was taken." was well known in the Board, he said, as a pliable tool of ward politicians, and always got his one from his masters before voting on any serious question.

During his service on the Board he (Mr. Crosby) had tried to cut down the list of studies, to arrange the course for the benefit of the children, seven-eighths of whom left the public schools between the ages of 11 and 14 years; to eliminate the foreign languages, and to teach the children the history of this, our country, and make them good citizens.

He was willing, he said, to place his record in the Board of Education alongside of Commissioner Moriarty's, and he thought it would not suffer by comparison. A Commissioner like Moriarty, he said, who believed the present system of education a good one, and was against any change, when by it foreign languages are taught five hours a week and American history less than an hour, was in no position to criticise the course of a man who had the courage to state his convictions against such a condition of things and recommend a change. about that in the meeting to-night, but no action was taken."

When seen after the meeting Lieut. Drew was not inclined to say much about what had taken place between him and Col. Cavanagh, but he additted that the Colonel had acknowledged that he spoke heatily.

"The matter was exaggerated at first." said Drew. "I'm not a drinking man, and, of course, I felt badly over it, but the Colonel did the square thing to-night and the matter is ail done with."

the square thing to-night and the matter is all done with."

All the evening the effects of Gen. Fitzgerald's recent remarks were evident in the lively drill which the company up stairs was put through. A member of another company of the reziment, who was looking on, said:

"That Van Cortlandt Fark drill and the General coming here and jumping on the officers afterward was just the best thing that could have happened. You can bet the men are working now, and the officers too. The Captains get the companies out and drill 'em for keeps.

Under similar circumstances, he was wont to say, he would kill himself. Four weeks ago Schour had a quarrel with his employer and went home vowing he wouldn't be bossed by anybody. Since then he has read about suicides more assiduously than ever—lie had saved money, and there wasn't any danger of his starving, but his mind had evidently been unbalanced by the grewsome nature of his favorite reading matter.
